In conjunction with World AIDS Day, the Institute of Cultural Inquiry (ICI) is proud to present Forget Foucault, a tactical event aimed at AIDS awareness and remembrance. Forget Foucault uses button badges with the names of notable people who have died as a result of AIDS, along with either “forget” or “remember.” The buttons will be given out for free and people will be able to pick the button(s) of their choice. In this, the project questions who and how we remember (or choose not to remember) those that society has lost. Over the last 20 years, ICI has remained steadfast in its efforts to raise awareness for AIDS through projects such as the AIDS Bottle Project (1990-2000) and the AIDS Chronicles (1994-present) Forget Foucault is a continuation of these efforts.

Participated in the event? Enjoy the discussion? Think we should have done things differently?
